Hi Karen

I enclose two photos of my 5 yo Highland mare Amy. Last year you can see that much of her mane was rubbed out in spite of being stabled morning and evening through the midge season, regularly shampooed with an insecticidal shampoo and with regular applications of [REDACTED] [harsh chemical]. This more or less kept things under control, although she still had a few [REDACTED] [minor wounds].

But in photo 2 you can see a different story, after using your oil & shampoo as directed (and adding Protexin [probiotics] to her feed as you suggested) for three months. Her mane is growing in thick and fast with excellent quality strong hair, she has no [REDACTED] [minor wounds] and is a far less itchy and a much happier pony. She no longer requires stabling. She's looking fabulous (and yes, the midges have been out and going this year). Hopefully she will have a proper Highland pony mane one of these days!

I've been using it for everything including my itchy terrier with success. In fact I use it on everything - it was very helpful when one of my geldings rubbed himself on a newly creosoted telegraph pole in his field and took acres of hair off - washed him with the shampoo and used the oil, and hair regrowth started in three days.

Unfortunately I couldn't find a picture of her tail last year, but a similar story there. Great stuff and do you know, I like the smell!

Best regards
