Hi Karen, it's been a while since I gave an update on Mojo [horse] (& Cassie the cat)...

After last winter's major battle with Mojo's [REDACTED] [mud issues] this year with the incessant rain I feared the worse but... nothing!

He's out everyday & so far Mojo has been doing really well (touch wood) and he's looking brilliant. No one can believe he's not on a ton of feed with his shiny coat. I just tell them about Ruggle-it & Protexin ☺

As for Cassie with her skin issues & scratching, she's had a few baths (not happy!) and I've been using the oil as you directed. The scabs were gone in a couple of weeks & haven't returned and I now just top up the oil every now & then.

I haven't used "traditional" flea [REDACTED] [products] since and her coat is lovely & shiny. She flatly refused to eat the probiotics though so I've used them instead!

Thanks again for your wonderful products. Hope you haven't been troubled too much with the recent flooding. X

Hi Karen, hope you are well. Mojo has been doing great this summer with his Ruggle-it - no scabs this year which is wonderful!

HOWEVER (!) my cat has now decided to get some rather large [redacted] [crusty lumps] and is scratching quite a lot.

I've used "traditional" flea [redacted] [products] & combed her through & there is no evidence of fleas.

The [redacted] [crusty lumps] are on the back of her neck & under her chin currently, but she's super furry & it's difficult to say for definite if there are others but I don't think so.

She's never had this before [R&SL comment – 2013 was a very bad year for Harvest Mites, especially for cats – probably thanks to a proper summer at last!].

I moved back in April & she had a bit of a rough time finding her feet initially with some fairly dominant tom cats (which have thankfully now gone) so I'm wondering whether it's stress. She got bitten by the tom & had to have [redacted] [some Veterinary products] & painkillers and it's been since then she's been scabby.

To add to that, she's always been very food intolerant (why do I pick up all the sickly ones?!) since I got her at 6 months as a stray. She's on hypoallergenic dry food (James Wellbeloved) as anything else makes her vomit. [R&SL comment – there are often connections between such 'intolerances' and then an extreme immune response to being bitten by a bug, e.g. mite, flea.]

I'm wondering if Ruggle-it would help but not really sure how I would treat her as she's none too keen on sprays!

Any help/guidance you could give would be much appreciated.

[R&SL replied with guidance on how to use our Ruggle-it products on a nervous cat – there was nothing difficult, but certainly Ruggle-it is unusual in its application & absolute flexibility & versatility – but hopefully worth the effort!]

Kind regards

Lisa

Many thanks to Lisa Young, Mojo & Cassie for taking the time to write this feedback.
